CLIENT MONEY

Money held by the firm will be treated as client money in accordance with the rules of the FCA. The client bank accounts have statutory trust status and are segregated from the firms own funds. Money is held at an approved bank. Money may be held in an account which is pooled with money of other clients, this means you may not have a claim against a specific sum of money in a specific bank account but your claim may be against the client money pool. Money other than that held for settlement of a transaction will attract interest in accordance with the terms of business. Interest rate paid is shown in the terms of business. All interest on non ISA bank accounts pays net interest unless the correct Bank of Scotland tax forms are completed and accepted by the bank. No liability can be accepted by the firm for loss of gross interest where it may be payable gross but is paid net due to the forms being incomplete. If a transaction is undertaken which requires that your money is paid to a third party in connection with that transaction the legal and regulatory regime may be different than in the United Kingdom. This may mean that in the event of default your money may be treated differently than it would in the UK.

* Please delete as appropriate. It may be important that you give this authority if we control any of your investments.
